We believe that the government is concerned about the people and their well-being It is also a fact that India is vast country and may be compared with a cauldron 01 boiling problems. In formulating their policies, the govt. fails to address many 01 these problems. Sometimes solution to one problem aggravates others. This may be due to the truncated views maintained by the existing govt. system. In orderto realise our goal of achieving Child Rights we undertake the task of influencing the people ir the corridors of power, so that changes in Govt. policies that pose as a hindrance ir realising the rights could be brought about.
